Not illustrated. 1844 Excerpt: . . . watch on the tops of high hills for the first appearance of the new moon, of which notice was given by sound of trumpet and messengers, Psa. lxxxi. 3. and the first day was a solemn feast. As the solar year, or the time in which the earth goes round the sun, is more than twelve lunar months, the Jews were forced to add a month every second or third year, else the spring months and festivals, in a few years, would have fallen into the middle of winter. It is this method of observing the time of the passover, which is the same time as our Easter, by making it depend upon the moon, that causes it to come on different days in the months of March and April. The Jewish months were named from the season of the year. Thus Abib, the first month,...
